MANSFIELD, O.

The Georgia Minstrels are booked for at Miller's Hall on Monday, April 19th. Amos Kanaga returned from Columbus last evening and left for Washington to-day.

The fifty-second meeting of the Richmond County Bible Society was held in the Methodist Church last Sunday evening.

In the Dick vs. Holt case, which was on trial last week, a verdict was rendered for the defendant. A motion was made for a new trial.

A petition was received from O. H. Bush and S. Ulrich to give the Mansfield Telephone Exchange the privilege to erect poles and put up wires in the city for the transaction of business. This was granted by a resolution from Mr. Waugh.

LIMA, O.

A fire broke out Saturday morning about 9 o'clock in a barn across the creek and the wind blowing severely caused the fire to spread to fences, but no dwellings were burned. The fire engine tore through the square, causing two or three runaways. Mr. Ridmoun was thrown from a buggy and run over by the fire engine, crushing his skull. He died shortly afterward. Another man had his leg broken in a bad place. The barn contained one ton of hay, one hundred and fifty chickens and a cow. They were all burned.

LAWRENCEBURG, IND.

The Lexington Ice Company have opened an office just above the Sayer Bank, on Mill street. A happy locality, as the doctors and lawyers can keep cool now without any trouble.

Everybody will hear and read of the death of John R. Cleary with a sigh of sad regret. In the bosom of his family, at 6 o'clock Friday evening, he breathed his last. Scarcely he lived, and as scarcely he died. The sun of his life went down in an evening sky without a single cloud to disturb the beauty of its splendor. Thus ripe in years and usefulness, his soul has taken its flight, beloved, honored and esteemed by everybody, and without an enemy in the world. A gentleman by birth, fortune and profession, he emanated from one of the best families of his native country (Ireland), and the Press truly says of him, that "he is an honored son of an honored sire." But we will not attempt to write his obituary—we will leave it for a more able pen to do him justice.

NEWARK, O.

Mayor Hedding has filed in the Probate Court a notice to contest the election held last Monday. The case is set for hearing before Judge Thomas Saturday, April 17th, at ten o'clock.

Saturday about 12 o'clock a fire was discovered in the Pulp Mill on the Hydraulic, belonging to A. Hill & Sons. The alarm was sounded and the fire companies were soon on the ground. The wind was blowing very hard at the time, and by the time the engines began throwing water several stables and other buildings near by had caught and were discovered to be in flames. The firemen turned their attention to the burning stables and residences at first, and soon had them out of danger. By hard work, in about half an hour, the firemen had the entire fire under control. At one time it looked like a great part of the town would be burned. While the fire was at its height on the Hydraulic no less than three or four houses were on fire on Main street. Thanks to the Holly Water Works and the noble firemen in saving us from a serious conflagration. The damages on the Pulp Mill are estimated from $1,500 to $2,000, and fully insured. The fire originated in the north-east corner of the mill, among some straw. This mill furnished pulp for the paper mills, and will cause them to shut down till the Pulp Mills can be rebuilt.

AURORA, IND.

Proceeds of the Ed. Mason benefit amounted to $110.

Yesterday afternoon we visited the scene of the fire at Middletown, where Alex. Hill & Son's pulp mill was partly consumed by the fiery flames on Saturday night. The loss will probably reach $5,000, which was fully covered by insurance.

FIRST LOVE.

"Did I ever love any other girl?" repeated a prospective bridegroom, in answer to the fearful query of his intended; "why, of course not; how could you ask such a question? This heart knew no awakening until the sunshine of your heart streamed in and woke it to ecstasy." And then he went home and said to himself, "I must hurry those things out of the way right off, or there'll be a row," and collected a great pile of letters, written in all kinds of feminine hands, with lots of faded flowers and photographs and locks of hair and bits of faded ribbon, and other things; and when the whole collection had been examined into the kitchen grate, he drew a deep sigh, and said to himself, "There goes all that's left of fourteen undying loves—let 'em flicker."

Bishop Jagger confirmed four persons at Christ E. E. Church yesterday morning.

It has wonderful power on bowels, liver, and kidneys. What? Kidney-Wort, try it.

AUTHORS AND PUBLICATIONS.

The London Examiner recently published a portrait and sketch of Mr. Long-fellow.

D. Appleton & Co. will publish Huth's "Life and Writings of Thomas Henry Buckle."

Thackeray's masterpiece, "Vanity Fair," will shortly appear at Rome, in an Italian translation.

D. Lothrop & Co. will publish selections from the works of Mr. Gladstone in the Spare-Minute Series.

Miss Thackeray is to write of Mme. de Sevigne and Mme. de Staël for the series of Foreign Classics.

J. B. Lippincott & Co. have issued a new translation of Camoens' "Lusiad" in the Spenserian stanza by R. F. Duff.

Houghton, Osgood & Co. will shortly issue a new edition of "The Satchel Guide for the American Tourist in Europe."

"Golden-Rod," a delightful little novella published in Harper's Half-Hour Series, was written by Constance Carey Harrison.

The author of "The Value of Life," a reply to Mallock's "Is Life Worth Living?" is said to be Dr. Mary Putnam Jacobi of New York.

G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York, have ready "Studies of Irving," containing essays by Charles Dudley Warner, Bryant and the elder Putnam.

M. Alphonse Daudet, the foremost of modern French novelists, has a finely-cut physiognomy, and wears a pointed beard and flowing hair. He is modest almost to timidity.

Miss Abbey Langdon Alger, has made a translation of Helen von Racowitz's "My Relations with Ferdinand Lassalle," a book which has made no little sensation in Germany.

Estes & Lauriat have published in pamphlet form the argument of Mr. Charles Francis Adams, Jr., on "The Federation of the Railroad System," before the House Committee on Commerce.

Harper & Bros. have under way a "Cyclopedia of American History," by Benson J. Lossing. Two new novels will be added to the Library of American Fiction, "Virginia Bohemians," by John Esten Cooke, and "A Foreign Marriage."

The Atlantic for May will contain a short story by Mr. W. H. Bishop, author of "Detmold," styled "McClutry's False Face;" there will be an anonymous article on "The Democratic Presidential Nomination;" Richard Grant White will discuss "British Americanisms;" Dr. Angel's "Recollections of Hunt" will be continued; and Mr. Willard Brown will write concerning "The Examination System in Education."

Scribner's Monthly bound volume XIX, November 1879 to April 1880, inclusive, is received through Messrs. Robt. Clarke & Co. This volume contains some of the finest papers that have appeared in this best of all magazines. The continued improvement in this publication shows that there is no such thing as standing still in the publication of a magazine. Long ago Scribner's was pronounced as perfect a type of what a magazine should be as it was possible to reach, yet improvements have gone on in it with much greater rapidity than in the cases of the slow coach magazines that were then so far behind this one and showed such room for improvement. Scribner's is not only to-day the finest of American magazines, but there is no English publication that is anything near its equal.

MARTIN VAN BUREN'S NIECE.

Her Sad Life and Death—Supposed Suicide.

[New York Tribune.]

The death of Mrs. George F. Deutch, from opium poisoning, was reported yesterday to Coroner Knox by Dr. B. C. Miller, of the Metropolitan Hotel, who had for some weeks past had her under his care. Ill-health, brought on by sorrow and misfortune, had induced the use of laudanum, and the habit of resorting to the drug to allay suffering had become confirmed. Six weeks ago Dr. Miller was called to see Mrs. Deutch at No. 215 East Twenty-third street, by a stranger, who said that his name was Newhall, and that he was a friend of the lady, anxious for her recovery. He found a woman about thirty-five years old, of culture and refinement, but with plain traces of opium eating in her face and form. She submitted herself willingly to his treatment and the first and most difficult stage of the disease was successfully passed, when the excitement caused a relapse, and she returned to the use of stimulant.

The physician warned her of her danger, but in vain. Mrs. Deutch had recently removed to a boarding house kept by Mrs. Morgan, at No. 234 West Eleventh street. Here on Monday morning Dr. Miller found her, half conscious from the use of opium. She refused pettishly to answer his questions, and after satisfying himself by a search that no more of the poison was within her reach he went away. An hour later a boarder in the house found Mrs. Deutch dead. A second search revealed a two ounce bottle that had contained laudanum, and a larger one in which had been chloral. The labels had been carefully removed.

Dr. Weller learned that Mr. Newhall was really George F. Deutch, his patient's divorced husband. He now heard that he had called at the house after Mrs. Deutch's death and had brought with him a relative, a Mrs. Broadhead, saying that Mrs. Morgan wanted to see her. He then went away and did not return, but yesterday sent a lawyer to ask what he could do. At the number given by the lawyer as Mr. Deutch's residence, No. 46 West Eleventh street, no person of that name is known.

The Coroner's inquiry brought out the unhappy history of the dead woman, of which the physician had learned much already from her. Mrs. Deutch's maiden name was Harriet Van Buren, and she was a niece of Martin Van Buren, in 1837 President of the United States. Her father was Dr. Peter Van Buren, of this city, the President's brother. Harriet was his youngest child. Her only relative now living is General Thomas B. Van Buren, Consul General to Japan. Born to position and wealth, and of great personal beauty, Miss Van Buren became a favorite of society. From the back windows of her father's house, in Twenty-second street, she made the acquaintance of a man many years her senior, who lived opposite, in Twenty-first street.

Meetings followed. The man introduced himself as George F. Deutch. Her father disapproved of the acquaintance, and the admirer never called at his house until after his death in 1875. Then he was a frequent visitor there, and during the International Exhibition in 1876 married Miss Van Buren in Philadelphia. This union was one of misery, and soon Mr. Deutch procured a divorce in Utah, it is said with his wife's consent. They separated, and Mrs. Deutch, broken in health, traveled in several States and at length reached this city, where her former husband again began to visit her.

Mrs. Deutch's brother, General Van Buren, had written to her husband severely censuring his conduct in ill-treating his sister. Mrs. Deutch claimed that the divorce was fraudulently procured, and had retained Aaron F. Vanderpool to contest the decree. Mr. Deutch's business is not known, though he is supposed to be a man of means. He is fifty-five years of age, with white hair, while his wife was hardly thirty-five.

An autopsy will be made to-day, and the inquest will be held at a future day. Mrs. Deutch's fortune was ample.

If there be one man in England who ought to come to the United States and make a thorough study of the political methods and habits of Americans, that man is the editor of The Pall Mall Gazette. In a recent issue occurs this grossly inaccurate passage: "The itinerant speakers who are then (in a Presidential election in the United States) employed to coax or bully the masses into voting for one side or the other belong to the lowest order of dealers in partisan oratory. The Americans know well that, if great multitudinous constituencies are to be moved, coarse instrumentalities must be employed. There must be gross exaggerations, bold misrepresentations, arguments too weak to deserve the name of sophistry, clumsy dabbling of one side with flattery, and indecent pelting of the other side with rhetorical mud. These are among the necessities of democracy; but the utmost is done in the United States to prevent their degrading the not too plentiful stock of statesmanship and public character which the Republic contains. The stump orator is a person who earns a day's pay by a day's declamation, and who has no reputation to lose." If this dull writer will take a voyage across the Atlantic in the autumn he will find the most prominent and most respected leaders of both political parties on the stump.

Catching a Weasel Asteep.

The improbability of catching a weasel asleep has passed into a proverb, yet a correspondent writing from Missouri says he knows of one instance where it was done. On an island near there in the Missouri River, a small tract of land was cleared and a little house was built. It was occupied by a young man who boarded himself and lived there. In putting up the house it was set on posts, with the floor about two feet from the ground, so as not to be flooded in case of an overflow of the river.

The man lived there kept some hens, but found that they had an enemy, as he would occasionally find one with the head cut and blood sucked. Suspecting it to be a weasel, he set a trap, but did not capture the varmint. One warm day when he went home from here, he noticed as he approached the house something lying in the sun under the south side of the house, but not being armed he trod softly to the north window, reached in and got his gun and shot the weasel.

Mrs. Astor's Dinner.

[Washington Star.]

At the dinner which Mrs. Astor gave to the President and Mrs. Hayes in New York, last week, that lady wore her handsomest set of pearls, instead of the diamonds she displayed while visiting just before Lent. The flowers at this dinner were not only very beautiful, but their arrangement was peculiarly tasteful as well as novel. The stands on which they were placed were so high that the guests on the opposite sides of the table could look beneath them across the table at each other. This, of course, added to the pleasing effect, as they seemed to see each other through floral archways. Floral decorations for dinner tables should always be either low enough to look over them or high and far enough apart to permit one to look between them at one's vis-a-vis.

A Church Usher's Fearful Mistake.

[New York Sun.]

An usher in the North Baptist Church, in Christopher street, caused a sensation last Sunday evening. As the pastor, the Rev. J. J. Brouner, entered the pulpit, he was shocked by a sudden outburst of mirth in the choir gallery. Two young persons, wearing ulsters and Derby hats, had been shown seats. The usher was surprised when only one of them removed his hat. He waited some time for the offending head covering to be removed, and then reached over the back of a pew and removed it himself. Immediately he discovered, as did many other persons, that the wearer was a young lady, and therefore entitled to wear a hat in church. Above the noise of the organist's voluntary rose that of the involuntary mirth of many in the congregation.

THE FASTEST ENGINE.

To Run Ninety Miles in Ninety Consecutive Minutes.

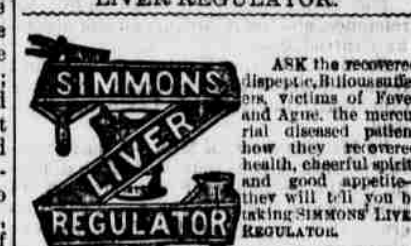

[Philadelphia Times.]

The Baldwin Locomotive Works has just turned out a remarkable specimen of work intended for a remarkable purpose. It is a passenger engine, constructed for the Reading Road, to run over the Bound Brook route between this city and New York, in which service it is expected to eclipse anything of the kind going. It has been built chiefly for speed, and if the expectations of the contracting parties are carried out the time between this city and New York over the above route will be lessened about half an hour. The distance between Philadelphia and New York is ninety miles, and the fast trains over both the Pennsylvania and Bound Brook Roads have been making it in about two hours.

The Reading people are aiming to make the distance in one hour and a half, and with this object in view they some time ago contracted with the Baldwin Company to build them an engine that would perform that work, or in other words, accomplish ninety miles in ninety consecutive minutes. The new engine has the largest pair of driving wheels, perhaps, of any passenger locomotive in this country, the wheels being 6½ feet in diameter. The ordinary driving wheel of passenger engines has a diameter of from 5 to 5½ feet. The new engine is different in other respects also, having but one pair of driving wheels instead of two additional smaller ones, as is the usual custom.

It is also much heavier than the regular passenger engine; its weight is about 84,000 pounds, while the ordinary engine weighs from 70,000 to 75,000 pounds. It is expected to make the entire distance to New York without stopping to take water. That this may be done it is supplied with a tank of about twice the capacity of engines in general. It will hold 4,000 gallons of water. The capacity of the ordinary passenger engine is from 2,000 to 2,500 gallons. The new engine, which was taken out of the works a few days ago and is now at Reading, will be put to use on the Bound Brook route within a week or ten days. Should the attempt to thus lessen the time between Philadelphia and New York prove successful other engines will be built and put regularly on the road.

LIVER REGULATOR.

The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the World!

For DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, Jaundice, Bilious attacks, SICK HEADACHE, Colic, Depression of Spirits, SOUR STOMACH, Heart Burn, &c., &c.

This unrivaled Southern Remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is containing those Southern Roots and Herbs, which all-wise Providence has placed in countries where Liver Diseases most prevail. It will cure all diseases caused by Deangement of the Liver and Bowels.

The SYMPTOMS of Liver Complaint are a bitter or bad taste in the mouth; Pain in the Back, Sides or Joints, often mistaken for Rheumatism; Sour Stomach; Loss of Appetite; Bowels irregularly constive and lax; Headache; Loss of Memory, with a painful sensation of having failed to do something which ought to have been done; Dizziness, Low Spirits, a thick yellow appearance of the Skin and Eyes, a dry Cough often mistaken for Consumption.

Sometimes many of these symptoms attend the disease, at others a very few; but the Liver, the largest organ in the body, is generally the seat of the disease, and if not regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness and DEATH will ensue. I can recommend as an efficacious remedy for diseases of the Liver, Heartburn and Dyspepsia, Simmons' Liver Regulator.

LEWIS G. WUNDER, 1625 Master street, "We have tested its virtues, persons who know that for Dyspepsia, Biliousness, and Throbbing headache, it is the best medicine the world ever saw. We have tried forty other remedies before Simmons' Liver Regulator, but none of them gave us more than temporary relief; but the Regulator not only relieved, but cured us."—Ed.
